

Leading People Through Change

Offered as part of the Supervision Fundamentals Certification

Your instructor:

Natalie Ackerman has helped thousands of leaders over the last 14+ years learn skills and mindsets to become more effective and to reach their leadership potential. She has worked with manufacturing leaders at every level across a variety of sectors including industrial, food, precision machining, metal fabrication, and aerospace.

Today's most successful companies are those that can change quickly. Yet, overcoming people's natural resistance to change is challenging. If your job or assignment involves getting people to accept and move ahead with something new and different, this workshop is for you.

Topics will include:

- What's behind typical human responses to change and how to handle those not-so-apparent factors?
- The surprising but most effective ways to guide people through transitions and help them return successfully to productive, committed work.
- A roadmap of steps and activities to guide people through transitions at work.
- Ways to support and encourage movement toward the goals and purpose of change at work.
